1. A Russian port repair works was located in the Soviet port at Szczecin (Stettin) from 1946 until 1951. In 1951 about 500 Russian soldiers and 150 German specialists were employed there. All the Germans were released in the second half of 1951.
2. Work at the repair works consisted mainly of repairing damaged ships. Russian ships arrived empty and were loaded in Szczecin with materials such as cement, salt, foodstuffs, factory machinery from dismantled plants in Poland and East Germany, new machinery produced in Poland, sugar, coal and textiles. Three to four ships were always being loaded at the port.
